QUESTION OF CONTROL OF TELEPHONES

COMMERCE COMMISSION GIVES RULING ON ITS JURISDICTION

CAN CONTROL RATES IN ANY COMPANY FROM WHOSE LINES ANY PERSON CAN TALK OUTSIDE OF ANY STATE.

WASHINGTON, March 23—Speculation is acute among legal representatives of the telephone and telegraph companies as to just how far the interstate commerce commission has authority to control their respective organizations and as to what constitutes interstate and intrastate commerce as affecting these commercial agents.

Only in one case has the commission expressed itself regarding telephone companies. It has held, however, that it has jurisdiction over both telephone companies and telegraph companies. It can require them to publish their schedules of rates and prosecute them for rebating. Beyond this, however, the commission as yet has not made a definite ruling.

In this connection, a commercial concern of this city investigated the question, and their findings while unofficial are accepted generally as based on good conclusions. Mainly their deductions have been confined to telephone companies, as it is generally understood, that the public is more interested regarding the law governing these concerns than with regard to the telegraph companies. Their report reads:

"Telephone companies, whose lines are all within the limit of a single state, territory or district of the United States and which have no connection whatever with lines outside of the state, do not come within the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission, but are subject solely to such requirements as may be imposed by the laws of the state in which they are doing business. However, if such a company as above described transmits a message over its lines to some other point within the state and there connects with an interstate line under an arrangement for transmission outside of the state, it would then be considered to be engaged in interstate commerce and subject to the interstate commerce law.

"In short, any telephone company from whose line a subscriber can talk to a person outside of the state, territory or district in which he may be, is engaged in interstate commerce, and subjected by the interstate commerce commission to be under its jurisdiction."

In the only ruling on the subject that the commission has made, it was held that no telephone company over which it may have jurisdiction can lawfully give the same service to one subscriber at a lower rate than to another, no matter when the contract with either subscriber may have been made. In view of the general practice of telephone companies throughout the country to permit old subscribers to renew their contract at the same rate from year to year notwithstanding the enlargement of the service or the increase of facilities, while at the same time new subscribers are charged a higher rate, it might be in order to point out that on the demand of subscriber paying a higher rate than another for the same service, no matter how much higher rate may be, the telephone company can be compelled either to reduce or increase its charges to a uniform rate to all subscribers receiving the same sort of service.

VICTIMS OF MAINE ARE BURIED

...MENT CEREMONIES ARE HELD IN NATIONAL CEMETERY

BODIES OF 34 MEN KILLED IN EXPLOSION FIND RESTING PLACE AMONG THE OTHER UNKNOWN DEAD.

WASHINGTON, March 23 — With ... and impressive ceremony, ... tribute was paid today to the memory of the officers and men ... went down in the battleship Maine in Havana harbor 14 years ago.

Side by side with thousands of other "Unknown Dead" 34 bodies were laid under the sod in the national burying ground, Arlington cemetery, while President Taft, members of the cabinet, other high government officials, officers and men of the army and navy and 5,000 citizens stood with uncovered heads.

The funeral service was read by Rev. G. Livingston Bayard, chaplain of the Washington navy yard, assisted by Rev. Father John Chadwick of New York, who was chaplain of the Maine at the time of the fateful explosion.

Preceding the service at the cemetery, was a solemn procession from the White Lot, the park behind the White House, where the ceremonies began. In the size of the escort and official exercises, the funeral ranked second in the history of the country only to that of the late President McKinley.

The 34 buried today were the last of the martyrs recovered from the Maine wreck, the other 227 having been taken out shortly after the explosion, where they were identified, shipped to their several former homes in different parts of the country and buried in separate private funerals by their families. The 34 bodies, however, which had lain under Havana harbor for 14 years, could not be identified, and so the great funeral was arranged as a tribute of the nation to her heroes.

Before noon today the cruiser Birmingham arrived at the Washington navy yard with the remains of the men recently taken from their watery tomb. At 3 o'clock they were taken, on 34 caissons, to the White Lot, where a distinguished gathering, headed by President Taft, awaited, in stands draped in the national mourning.

Among those in the stands were Rear Admirals Charles D. Sigsbee and Richard Wainwright, who were captain and executive officer, respectively of the Battleship Maine, when the explosion sent the vessel to the bottom of the harbor and carried with her the gallant officers and men.

TO FIX DATE FOR TRIAL OF MRS. SCHENCK

FOR ATTEMPTING TO MURDER HER MILLIONAIRE HUSBAND

SENSATIONAL TESTIMONY INTRODUCED AT TRIAL LAST YEAR BUT JURY WAS UNABLE TO AGREE ON VERDICT.

WHEELING, W. Va., Mar. 23—A date will be fixed today for the beginning of the second trial of Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenck, who is charged with having attempted to kill her millionaire husband.

Mrs. Schenck was arrested on suspicion in November, 1910, when her husband, John Schenck, was suddenly stricken with a mysterious malady, which was discovered to have been caused by a deadly poison. At the trial, which took place in January, 1911, the prosecuting attorney endeavored to prove that the accused woman administered the poison by concealing it in her husband's food. Sensational evidence was introduced tending to show that the millionaire's wife had been carrying on a secret love affair with a young society man of Wheeling. It was charged that she wished to do away with her husband in order to secure at least part of his enormous wealth that she might share it with the man with whom she was alleged to have been infatuated.

Mrs. Schenck's firm denial of all charges made such an impression on the jury that the trial resulted in a disagreement, 11 of the jurors holding out for acquittal.

Schenck subsequently began proceedings for divorce, but a number of friends of the family intervened and induced him to discontinue the suit.

Monday the finals will be reached, when the victors of yesterday's contest will meet and endeavor to defeat the team that won the cup in the recent Despland tournament for mixed doubles, Miss Constance McConnell of Kittaning, Pa., and A. E. Donnelly of Magnolia avenue. Two handsome cups are being offered in the Bennett tournament and it is likely that the court in the rear of this hotel will be surrounded by lovers of the game Monday.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN
Food Specialist

EXCLUSIVE FRUIT DIET WON'T DO.

Many writers on food hold that it is possible to live on fruits alone and this conclusion has become more plausible since the reduction in standard tables of the percentage of albumen required in the ration. Experiments made with an ape, the animal whose nutrition is nearest to man's, now seem to indicate that the fruitarian theorists' conclusions are incorrect—unless fruit be understood to include nuts. The monkey pined after a time when it was confined to fruits exclusively, but revived when a small amount of animal food was added. It is now well established that the average dietary contains too much protein (contained largely in meat, eggs, fish and cheese), but it is not advisable to live on fruits alone, although it is well established that the highest class of mental and physical work can be done on fruits with nuts and cereals, although such a diet is improved by the addition of buttermilk or cottage cheese.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN

ALL FRUIT EXPOSED FOR SALE SHOULD BE SCREENED.

St. Louis, Mo., has an ordinance requiring that all fruits and vegetables exposed for sale shall be covered by screens to protect them from flies. Such an ordinance should be adopted and enforced in every city. Street dust is a constant source of contamination of the most serious character, which can not be entirely obviated by sprinkling. Flies and other vermin are also constantly depositing filth and disease-producing germs on food exposed on the streets and this can be largely obviated by the adoption and enforcement of such an ordinance.

Nature Anticipates Art.

"The remains of that mastodon," said the scientist in the museum, "were found buried in an iceberg." "H'm," responded the man from Chicago, "that cold storage idea isn't so new after all."

Was Working in the Dark.

Secretary MacVeagh at a dinner in Washington, was urging the need of scientific financial laws. "But let us make these laws scientifically," he said. "We must be in light. If we work in the dark, you know, we will go wrong—like young Cornelius Hunt. Cornelius was called one winter morning before dawn, and told to go and harness the mule. The lad was too lazy to light a lantern, and in the dark he didn't notice that one of the cows was in the stable with the mule. As he tried to harness the cow his father, impatient at the long delay, shouted from the house: 'Cornee! Cornee! What ye doin'?' 'I can't get the collar over the mule's head,' the boy replied. 'His ears are frozen.'"

Great Premium Offer

THE circulation of The Gazette-News is already large but the publisher is determined to add several hundred more names to the list and in order to do so makes several offers that you cannot afford to miss.

We want to give every housewife in this country a new pair of SHEARS—not that we think you are out of shears at your house but we know that no matter how many pairs of shears you have, you will appreciate a new pair, especially the Eureka Trimmer Shears, which is a superior shear in every way to the ordinary pair of shears generally used in the everyday household.

This is not a philanthropic movement on our part nor a plan to disburse charity, nor is it a scheme to force people to buying something they do not need. We have learned the value of the housewife's good will, and this will be considered by us in offering these

Eureka Bent Trimmer Shears

We have bought another gross for distribution and those who do not respond to our offer immediately may not be able to get a pair. If you want to secure a pair then you will be sure of receiving your shears. This is a very liberal offer and one that can be taken advantage of by everyone in this country, and we want readers to our paper. We believe this offer will more than satisfy the most exacting subscriber.

Send us $1.50, and six cents additional if you desire the shears mailed, and we will send you the GAZETTE-NEWS FOR ONE YEAR AND A PAIR OF THESE SHEARS ABSOLUTELY FREE. This offer applies to either new subscriptions or renewals

ALL FRUIT EXPOSED FOR SALE SHOULD BE SCREENED.

St. Louis, Mo., has an ordinance requiring that all fruits and vegetables exposed for sale shall be covered by screens to protect them from flies. Such an ordinance should be adopted and enforced in every city. Street dust is a constant source of contamination of the most serious character, which can not be entirely obviated by sprinkling. Flies and other vermin are also constantly depositing filth and disease-producing germs on food exposed on the streets and this can be largely obviated by the adoption and enforcement of such an ordinance.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

EXCLUSIVE FRUIT DIET WON'T DO.

Many writers on food hold that it is possible to live on fruits alone and this conclusion has become more plausible since the reduction in standard tables of the percentage of albumen required in the ration. Experiments made with an ape, the animal whose nutrition is nearest to man's, now seem to indicate that the fruitarian theorists' conclusions are incorrect—unless fruit be understood to include nuts. The monkey pined after a time when it was confined to fruits exclusively, but revived when a small amount of animal food was added. It is now well established that the average dietary contains too much protein (contained largely in meat, eggs, fish and cheese), but it is not advisable to live on fruits alone, although it is well established that the highest class of mental and physical work can be done on fruits with nuts and cereals, although such a diet is improved by the addition of buttermilk or cottage cheese.

Was Working in the Dark.

Secretary MacVeagh at a dinner in Washington, was urging the need of scientific financial laws. "But let us make these laws scientifically," he said. "We must let in light. If we work in the dark, you know, we will go wrong—like young Cornelius Husk. Cornelius was called one winter morning before dawn, and told to go and harness the mule. The lad was too lazy to light a lantern, and in the dark he didn't notice that one of the cows was in the stable with the mule. As he tried to harness the cow his father, impatient at the long delay, shouted from the house: 'Corney! Corney! What ye doin'?' 'I can't get the collar over the mule's head,' the boy replied. 'His ears are frozen.'"

The Red Marshes

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Beyond the red marshes lay the sea. In the gray November days it was a tumbling sea, with the waves topped with white foam, and running in heavily through the rusty marsh grass.

But it was at low tide that Marta's little dory slipped down, the silver pathway of the streams that cut their way through the marshes.

Sometimes she met Jim Gregory coming back with lobsters from the early morning catch, and Jim would shake his head like a dog, and would ask in his surly way, "What good things are you taking to your dad this morning, Marta?" and Marta would pipe up with her clear note, "It's fried chicks."

For Marta's father worked on the new causeway, helping with his labor to make a permanent way to the mainland at high tide.

Jim Gregory, or, as the people of the town called him, "Black Gregory," did not work on the causeway. He preferred the free method of earning his living to the rule. He sold his lobsters to the summer hotels, and in winter sent them to the city Jim earned little, however. Perhaps that was the reason he had the name of being peculiar.

It was because Marta carried her father's dinner down the silver highways that Jim Gregory came through the marshes with his morning's catch rather than land at the docks in deeper water.

Jim loved Marta. Every day he brought her some offering from the sea. Sometimes Marta refused the gifts. "I don't take them," she said to Jim, one morning, as he held out to her a pair of shining mackerel.

"Why not?"

Marta looked away from him as she answered. "Mother says it isn't right. She wants—she wants me to marry Edward Ford, Jim."

Jim leaned far over and drew her down to him with a strong, brown hand.

"Marta," he said, with a sharp intake of his breath, "Marta, are you going to marry Ed?"

She shook her head. "No, no. I don't love him, but mother has set her heart on it."

"Why don't you wait to—sail—you?"

Marta raised her head quickly. "Don't you speak of it that way. Mother doesn't realize—she only thinks that Edward is prosperous."

That night the wind blew away the fog, but it also blew itself into a strong gale, which increased as the day advanced, until, at sunset, sky and water showed the blackness of a storm.

It was not until midnight, however, that the people in the town began to be afraid. Then it was learned that a half-dozen of the boats that had gone out early in the morning had not come back. The men from the life-saving station were on the watch, and flew signals to warn the boats coming in.

Up and down the beach went the people whose sons and husbands and fathers were out. They prayed wildly for their boys, children for their parents.

But nobody wept for Jim. Only Marta, straining her eyes through the blackness, prayed that he might be safe—that he might come back to her.

A shout went up, as somewhere, out in the heaping blackness, there shone a light that shifted to the left, showing working its way against wind and wave brought back five men.

Everybody he was, and some one near Marta.

Marta, searching the bronzed faces, asked, "Did you—did you find Jim Gregory?"

Each of him just as the storm broke," said one of the men. "We shouted, but he was too far away to hear us—we haven't seen him since."

All night long the life guards patrolled the beach. All night long Marta stretched her eyes out to sea. When dawn came the wind died, and the rain came up, rosy red above the horizon. And as it rose it showed for one the tossing waters a black speck.

"It's a boat!" said Marta.

"And there's a man in it, Miss," said one of the guards.

Then Marta fled homeward to hear the reproaches of her mother.

It was nearly noon when Marta went across the red marshes with her father's lunch.

When she met Jim Gregory she darted back up.

"Marta," he called, and brought his boat close to hers, and his voice was eager as he spoke, "Marta, me, on the beach, that you waited all night for news of me."

She answered him as she had answered her mother, "Surely a man has right to have one heart cry out for him when he is in the mercy of the wind and waves."

"Did your heart cry, Marta?"

In spite of her self-consciousness, she told him the truth. "If you had died my heart would have died with you, Jim."

No one could have called him "Black Gregory" if they could have seen him at that moment. His face was melted into tenderness.

"I think I came back because you called me, Marta," he said. "There was one moment when in the blackness I lost hope, but something seemed to urge 'Marta's waiting,' and so—I came."

Across the Aisle

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"That's Rudy's boat, pass, now," said the man across the aisle, eagerly. "Mighty pretty in this sunset light, eh?"

Jess opened her eyes. She had been dreaming for the last hour. The view was gorgeous from the car windows. She leaned forward, and looked out at the great enfolding mountains, the still, dark lake far below the track, the vast, outstanding pine tattoos beyond the pass itself. Somewhere over toward the golden sunset lay her brother's ranch, and they were life that had swept her out of the red, dry desert. After ten years of school teaching in the country, in a small way, enchantment that she should be out here, skimming over the last ridge of the Rockies.

"It won't be all easy work, Jess." Tom had written, "but I've got the upper hand of things here now, and I think you'll like it."

The man across the aisle was talking to his fellow passenger about old man, who had been dozing comfortably, and refused to warm up to the glories of the scenery.

"I wouldn't give a hand's breadth of this country up here for all Montana."

"Where you from?" growled back the other.

"Deerford, sir. Finest section and richest out here. Come into the smoking compartment with me and let me tell you about it."

He rose impulsively, a tall, strong-limbed youngster, with all the vivid appreciation and hope of the west in his face. Suddenly he hesitated and looked across the aisle at the girl there. Their eyes met, he hesitated, smiled, and reached for a handbag in the upper rack.

"Could I have this with you just while I step into the smoker?" he asked. "I won't be more than half an hour."

Jess bowed her head assentingly and he slipped the bag in beside her own suitcase on the floor. It seemed very heavy. After he had gone Jess drew her fur scarf over it and wondered who his owner was.

Not ten minutes later the train slowed up. There was the clang bins of air brakes. The wheels seemed to grate and grind along on the rails. Almost instantly shots sounded up front. Some of the men passengers rose. Jess held her breath and wondered if, after all, she was not to reach her new life.

The doors at the end of the car swung open. Two masked, armed men entered.

"Hands up and shut up, and nobody's to hurt," said one in hoarse. The other started systematically to search. At Jess' cost he reached for her suitcase and saw the girl's hand, clasped her pretty hand lay back on the rail top of the seat, white and death-like, and it closed on him. He opened all the suit case, back at her face, and passed on. Under her skirts rested her leather satchel unnoticed.

When she came to some one was battling for him to hold "steady."

"Plucky! Well, rather. That's better. It's all right now. We're on our way and the gang didn't get what it wanted after all," he heard hoarsely. "Thanks to you."

"I don't know what you mean," faltered Jess.

"Of course you don't, but I'm mighty obliged to you, just the same. They passed by the smoker and missed me, and didn't look for my belongings in your seat, that's all."

"You mean the satchel?"

"You didn't try to lift it, did you? It's full of solid gold. I thought I'd serve to know, don't you? Do you mind if I ask here? We'll be into Deerford in 30 minutes, and I leave the train there."

"So do I," said Jess, shyly.

"Where bound?" There was no mistaking his eagerness.

"To the Sawtooth ranch. It's my brother's."

"Tom McQuaid's? Why, we're neighbors. It's a queer little juggler's belief that we desire on, this world, isn't it? I'm Raleigh Barnes, superintendent at the Deerford works. Why, when I first spoke to you, and you looked at me—why, I just felt as if we must know each other. Don't you know what I mean?"

Jess' long dark lashes drooped downward.

"I know," she said. "I'm glad too, that you will be near—Tom."

"But do you know what you've done this day? Why, you'll be the heroine of the whole valley! We pay off in gold up there. And—well—the gold is in that satchel, and back yonder in the pass there's a band of train robbers waiting for who gave the wrong tip that the Deerford money was to go through on this train. Do you see now? It especially right here under your blessed feet."

"But I fainted. I wasn't a bit brave," protested Jess.

"And made doubly sure thereby," he laughed.

The train was pulling around the last mountain curve into Eagle View. He helped to slip her long cloak about her and fold the dark hair close about her throat. Then he reached down for the satchel and her suit case.

"I think Tom will meet me," said Jess, demurely. "But you may come, all the same—now."

Wise to Stick to Them.

"But for my oats being in the way I could wear one of them rich vests," sighed the horse.

"Too bad; but stick to your oats, girl. They may be unfashionable now, but you may need 'em in your old age to hook your spectacles over."

Watch Daytona Grow

Watch it through the colums of The Daytona-Gazette News. It is published every Saturday the year 'round. More improvements will be made in Daytona and vicinity during the coming summer than for several years past, and you will want, of course, to keep abreast with the progress of the community.

It gives you more local news than all other local papers of Volusia combined. Many of the little personals about persons with whom you are acquainted will also interest you.

The subscription price is but $1.50 a year, and we give you a useful pair of SHEARS as a premium if you subscribe before the supply is exhausted.

It will tell you of the improvements that are being made during the summer when you are at your northern abode.

The Red Marshes

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Beyond the red marshes lay the sea. In the gray November days it was a tumbling sea, with the waves topped with white foam, and coming in heavily through the rusty marsh grass.

But it was at low tide that Marta's little dory slipped down the silver pathway of the streams that cut their way through the marshes.

Sometimes she met Sim Gregory coming back with lobsters from the early morning catch, and Sim would shake back his black look, and would ask in his surly way, "What good things are you taking to your dad this morning, Marta?" and Marta would pipe up with her clear note, "It's fried clams."

For Marta's father worked on the new causeway, helping with his labor to make a permanent way to the rocky promontory which was cut off from the mainland at high tide.

Sim Gregory, or, as the people of the town called him, "Black Gregory," did not work on the causeway. He preferred the free method of earning his living in the sea. He sold his lobsters to the summer hotels, and in winter sent them to the city Sim cared little for money. Perhaps that was the reason he had the name of being peculiar.

It was because Marta carried her father's dinner down the silver highways that Sim Gregory came through the marshes with his morning's catch rather than land at the docks in deeper water.

Sim loved Marta. Every day he brought her some offering from the sea. Sometimes Marta refused the gifts. "I can't take them," she said to Sim, one morning, as he held out to her a pair of shining mackerel.

"Why not?"

Marta looked away from him as she answered. "Mother says it isn't right. She wants—she wants me to marry Edward Pond, Sim."

Sim leaned far over and drew her dory close to his own with a strong hand.

"Marta," he said, with a sharp intake of his breath, "Marta, are you going to marry Ed?"

She shook her head. "No, no, I don't love him, but mother has set her heart on it."

"Why does she want to—sell—you?"

Marta raised her head quickly. "Don't you speak of it that way. Mother doesn't realize—she only thinks that Edward is prosperous."

That night the wind blew away the fog, but it also blew itself into a strong gale, which increased as the day advanced, until, at sunset, sky and water showed the blackness of a storm.

It was not until midnight, however, that the people of the town began to be afraid. Then it was learned that a half-dozen of the boats that had gone out early in the morning had not come back. The men from the life-saving station were on the watch, and fires were lighted and bells were rung.

Up and down the beach went the people whose sons and husbands and fathers were at sea. Mothers wept for their boys, children for their parents.

But nobody wept for Sim. Only Marta, straining her eyes through the blackness, prayed that he might be safe—that he might come back to her.

A shout went up, as somewhere, out in the leaping blackness, there shone a light like a star. The lifeboat, working its way against wind and wave brought back five men.

"Everybody is safe," said some one near Marta.

Marta, searching the bronzed faces, asked, "Did you—did you find Sim Gregory!"

"We saw him just as the storm broke," said one of the men. "We shouted, but he was too far away to hear us—we haven't seen him since."

All night long the life guards patrolled the beach. All night long Marta strained her eyes out to sea. When dawn came the wind died, and the sun came up, rosy red above the horizon. And as it rose it showed far out on the tossing waters a black speck.

"It's a boat!" said Marta.

"And there's a man in it, miss," said one of the guards.

Then Marta fled homeward to hear the reproaches of her mother.

It was nearly noon when Marta went across the red marshes with her father's lunch.

When she met Sim Gregory she dared not look up.

"Marta," he called, and brought his boat close to hers, and his voice was eager as he spoke, "they told me, on the beach, that you waited all night for news of me."

She answered him as she had answered her mother, "Surely a man has right to have one heart cry out for him when he's at the mercy of the wind and waves."

"Did your heart cry, Marta?"

In spite of her self-consciousness, she told him the truth. "If you had died my heart would have died with you, Sim."

No one could have called him "Black Gregory" if they could have seen him at that moment. His face was melted into tenderness.

"I think I came back because you called me, Marta," he said. "There was one moment when in the blackness I lost hope, but something seemed to urge 'Marta's waiting,' and so—I came."

The Rialto.

The architect of the famous Rialto bridge in Venice was Antonio da Ponte. The bridge is a single arch, 90 feet in length, and is exceedingly strong and graceful. It is crossed by means of ascending and descending steps, while on the top are two ranges of shops, dividing the structure into three parallel streets.

Across the Aisle

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"That's Eagle's Nest pass, now," said the man across the aisle, eagerly. "Mighty pretty in this sunset light, eh?"

Jess opened her eyes. She had been drowsing for the last hour. The view was gorgeous from the car windows. She leaned forward, and looked out at the great encircling mountains, the still, dark lake far below the track, the vast, outstretching distances beyond the pass itself. Somewhere over toward the golden sunset lay her brother's ranch, and the new life that had swept her out of the rut down east. After ten years of school teaching in the country, it seemed like enchantment that she should be out here, skimming over the last ridge of the Rockies.

"It won't be all easy work, Jess," Tom had written, "but I've got the upper hand of things here now, and I think you'll like it."

The man across the aisle was talking to his fellow passenger, a sleepy old man, who had been dosing comfortably, and refused to warm up to the glories of the scenery.

"I wouldn't give a hand's breadth of this country up here for all Manhattan."

"Where you from?" growled back the other.

"Deerfoot, sir. Finest section and richest out here. Come into the smoking compartment with me and let me tell you about it."

He rose impulsively, a tall, strong-limbed youngster, with all the vivid assurance and hope of the west in his face. Suddenly he hesitated and looked across the aisle at the girl there. Their eyes met. He almost smiled, and reached for a handbag in the upper rack.

"Could I leave this with you just while I step into the smoker?" he asked. "I won't be more than half an hour."

Jess bowed her head assentingly and he slipped the bag in beside her own suitcase on the floor. It seemed very heavy. After he had gone Jess threw her fur scarf over it and wondered who its owner was.

Not ten minutes later the train slowed up. There was the sharp hiss of air brakes. The wheels seemed to grate and grind along on the rails. Almost instantly shots sounded up forward. Some of the men passengers rose. Jess held her breath and wondered if, after all, she was not to reach her new life.

The doors at the end of the car swung open. Two masked, armed men entered.

"Hands up and shut up, and nobody'll be hurt," said one tersely. The other started systematically to search. At Jess' seat he reached for her suitcase and saw the girl had fainted. Her pretty head lay back on the roll top of the seat, white and death-like, and it checked him. He glanced at the suit case, back at her face, and passed on. Under her skirts rested the leather satchel unobserved.

When she came to some one was bathing her face in cold water.

"Plucky? Well, rather. That's better. It's all right now. We're on our way and the gang didn't get what it wanted after all," he leaned nearer; "thanks to you."

"I don't know what you mean," faltered Jess.

"Of course you don't, but I'm mighty obliged to you just the same. They passed by the smoker and missed me, and didn't look for my belongings in your seat, that's all."

"You mean the satchel?"

"You didn't try to lift it, did you? It's full of solid gold. I think you deserve to know, don't you? Do you mind if I sit here? We'll be into Eagle View in 20 minutes, and I leave the train there."

"So do I," said Jess, shyly.

"Where bound?" There was no mistaking his eagerness.

"To the Sawtooth ranch. It's my brother's."

"Tom McQuaid's? Why, we're neighbors. It's a queer little juggler's ball that we dance on, this world, isn't it? I'm Raleigh Sayres, superintendent at the Deerfoot works. Why, when I first spoke to you, and you looked at me, I—why, I just felt as if we must know each other. Don't you know what I mean?"

Jess' long dark lashes drooped downward.

"I know," she said. "I'm glad too, that you will be near—Tom."

"But do you know what you've done this day? Why, you'll be the heroine of the whole valley! We pay off in gold up there. So, well—the gold is in that satchel, and back yonder in the pass there's a band of train robbers wondering who gave the wrong tip that the Deerfoot money was to go through on this train. Do you see now? It rested safely right here under your blessed feet."

"But I fainted. I wasn't a bit brave," protested Jess.

"And made doubly sure thereby," he laughed.

The train was pulling around the last mountain curve into Eagle View. He helped to slip her long cloak about her and fold the dark furs close about her throat. Then he reached down for the satchel and her suit case.

"I think Tom will meet me," said Jess, demurely. "But you may come, all the same—soon."

Wise to Stick to Them.

"But for my ears being in the way I could wear one of these very high collars." "Too bad; but stick to your ears, girl. They may be unfashionable now, but you may need 'em in your old age to hook your spectacles over."

JUST GOSSIP

BY THE GOSSIPER.

The second issue of the DeLand Supplement, issued under the direction of the new editor and proprietor, Clarence E. Woods, is a decided improvement over the first and if the paper continues to grow and prosper during the next year as it has during the past two weeks it will take a place with the best newspapers in the state of Florida in a short time. The Daily News welcomes Brother Woods as a member of the fraternity in this county.

The prospects for a busy summer in Daytona were never brighter than at the present time. Leaving aside the work which may result from the granting of the gas franchise, and the possibility of more should the electric railroad franchise pass, more real estate has changed hands this winter than in any season for many years, if not more than at any previous time. Many sales have escaped public notice through having been made direct between owner and purchaser and most of the transfers are of open lots upon which the buyers contemplate the erection of residences for either winter use or for all the year occupancy and this should mean work for the builders and mechanics and business for the stores.

A good lesson in the caution that is necessary in making arrests was given in the Federal court in Georgia, a day or two ago, where a sheriff was assessed a sum of $6,000 in damages by a jury, on account of an arrest he had made. The sheriff received a postal card from the police authorities of a Florida city asking him to arrest a man whose description was given. The sheriff sallied forth and found a man who corresponded somewhat with the description and took the protesting man into custody. Cash bail was offered, but the sheriff would have none of it, and the unfortunate man was kept in [illegible] to see what someone else is going to do—get hold of some of this land yourself—do it NOW, before it's too late, for you know that

Acreage property in the line of advance of value is the greatest investment in the world. Fortunes have been made by some small venture picked with discrimination.

We have for sale several tracts that can be bought at acreage prices now, but developments under way will make this land double in value within the next year, and it is impossible to predict the increase in value within the next few years.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

WE have a tract of one hundred acres running from river to ocean within one-half mile of Seabreeze.

WE have a tract of forty-five acres running from river to ocean within a quarter of a mile of Seabreeze.

WE have a tract with about 2000 feet frontage on the river and 1500 on the ocean within a mile of Seabreeze.

WE have a tract of 20 acres with 600 feet of river frontage half a mile from Seabreeze.

These Four Tracts Can Be Bought at Acreage Prices NOW but not for long.

We shall be glad to show them and to quote you prices if you mean business.

We can also quote you a price on 56 acres running from river to ocean just south of and adjoining a large tract that has been bought for development purposes.

We also have several residences that must be sold and will be sold at prices below their actual cost.

Call and see us if you wish to invest in property that will pay you a big return.

Bird's Home Instinct.

Spectators at a fire witnessed an interesting, if tragic, example of the actions of a bird which was guided only by the instinct that its home was in danger. The flames had begun to creep along the edge of the tower and every shingle on the roof was puffing a little jet of flame, when down wheeled a pigeon which had been dislodged from the tower and lit in the midst of the fire and smoke. Picking its way along, utter oblivious to the flames that must have been singeing its feathers, the pigeon went straight for its nest. A tongue of flame leaped out and the pigeon soared into the air. Then, as if irresistibly drawn into it, the bird dived into the furnace beneath and disappeared from sight.—Pasadena News.

Greek Military Training.

The ancient Greeks managed to train not only their troops but the whole nation by offering liberal prizes for proficiency in all kinds of bodily exercise, such as running, leaping, lifting, spear throwing and wrestling. At a distance of sixty yards their spearmen could hit a target with unfailing certainty.

PAUL GILMORE SCORES HIT WITH AUDIENCE IN DAYTONA

PLEASING RENDITION OF "THE MUMMY AND THE HUMMING BIRD" CLOSES THE LOCAL THEATRICAL SEASON.

It was no half-hearted reception that the Daytona audience gave Paul Gilmore and his company in the presentation of "The Mummy and the Humming Bird" at the New Daytona theater last night. In the audience were many who had seen Mr. Gilmore in this play before and it was plain that neither the experience of years nor the exactions of various roles had diminished his perfection in the part or operated against its artistic completeness.

Mr. Gilmore is very fortunate this season, in the revival of the play which made him a star, to have the support of Miss Kathryn Hutchinson, a charming young woman of southern birth, who is comperatively new to the stage, and yet, without the hardening experience of many seasons of arduous work, has reached a position which the less talented would strive for in vain. Her art is largely the absence of art, the delightful naturalness which is the essence of all true beauty and appealing charm.

Mr. Terhune's conception of the important role of "Guiseppe" was very good. He was the original in the part and the opening scene between Mr. Gilmore and Mr. Terhune is considered by many the most effective and engrossing in the play.

Mr. Gilmore moves through the four acts with effectiveness and poise, having forgotten none of the finer points which made notable the original production and having realized new possibilities in lines and action.

The rendition was frequently punctuated with applause by the audience, Mr. Gilmore coming before the audience at the end of the third act to personally thank the audience for the marked appreciation.

Fortunate Pribiloff Islanders.

A curious and interesting people are the Pribiloff Islanders in Bering sea. When the United States government took over the islands, along with Alaska, the Russian colonists became in a measure wards of the nation, but they have remained true to the influence to which they were first subjected, and in some respects are today more Russian than American at heart. All of them are members of the Russian church, and all of them have Russian names, selected for the most part from among the nobility. The United States government has in this instance been a faithful guardian of a primitive people. The result is that today they are the most highly civilized, best clothed, best fed, and most healthy of all the natives of Alaska.

The stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bonner on St. Patrick's day and left them a daughter, 9½ pounds weight.

Mrs. S. A. Manuel arrived from Bartow Tuesday to visit her sister, Mrs. Davis, for awhile before returning to her home in Texas. Her many friends are glad to welcome her to Kingston.

G. W. Gerner and wife, who have occupied the small Davis cottage on Main street, East, for about a month, left this week for Atlanta, Ga.

Out-of-the-Way German Inns.

Germany probably holds the record for out-of-the-way inn names. Berlin alone can boast the "Angry Louise," the "Comfortable Lamb," the "Cold Frog," the "Dirty Parlor," the "Bloody Bones," the "Boxers' Den," the "Four-Hundred-Weight Man" and the "Musical Cats," whilst a suburban landlord, whose house stands near a cemetery and is a popular "pull up" for mourners, has dubbed it, very appropriately, the "Last Tear."

Never.

If all women were beautiful and none of them ever grew old a married man's wife would never insist on taking him out to spend the evening anywhere.

JUST GOSSIP

BY THE GOSSIPER.

The second issue of the DeLand Supplement, issued under the direction of the new editor and proprietor, Clarence E. Woods, is a decided improvement over the first, and if the paper continues to grow and prosper during the next year as it has during the past two weeks it will take a place with the best newspapers in the state of Florida in a short time. The Daily News welcomes Brother Woods as a member of the fraternity in this county.

The prospects for a busy summer in Daytona were never brighter than at the present time. Leaving aside the work which may result from the granting of the gas franchise and the possibility of more should the electric railroad franchise pass, more real estate has changed hands this winter than in any season for many years, if not more than at any previous time. Many sales have escaped public notice through having been made direct between owner and purchaser and most of the transfers are of open lots upon which the buyers contemplate the erection of residences for either winter use or for all the year occupancy and this should mean work for the builders and mechanics and business for the stores.

A good lesson in the caution that is necessary in making arrests was given in the Federal court in Georgia, a day or two ago, where a sheriff was assessed a sum of $5,000 in damages by a jury, on account of an arrest he had made. The sheriff received a postal card from the police authorities of a Florida city asking him to arrest a man whose description was given. The sheriff sallied forth and found a man who corresponded somewhat with the description and took the protesting man into custody. Cash bail was offered, but the sheriff would have none of it, and the unfortunate man was kept in durance vile until the Florida officer arrived. He was promptly released, as he was the wrong man. The suit followed, and the judge who tried the case stated very plainly that when a man was unlawfully deprived of his liberty he was entitled to heavy damages. An officer arrests any man even if he has a warrant, at his peril of making the mistake of arresting the wrong man, and the judge reprehended the custom of arresting men on telegraphic or postal card advice.—Miami Herald.

Type of Great Man.

The greatest man is he who chooses the right with an invincible resolution; who resists the sorest temptations from within and without; who bears the heaviest burdens cheerfully; who is the calmest in storms and whose reliance on truth, on virtue, on God, is the most unfaltering.—Channing.

WE have a tract of forty-five acres running from river to ocean within a quarter of a mile of Seabreeze.

WE have a tract with about 2000 feet frontage on the river and 1500 on the ocean within a mile of Seabreeze.

WE have a tract of 20 acres with 600 feet of river frontage half a mile from Seabreeze.

These Four Tracts Can Be Bought at Acreage Prices NOW but not for long.

We shall be glad to show them and to quote you prices if you mean business.

We can also quote you a price on 86 acres running from river to ocean just south of and adjoining a large tract that has been bought for development purposes.

We also have several residences that must be sold and will be sold at prices below their actual cost.

Two Pickerel on One Line.

A humble and honest fisherman who set his traps for pickerel on a Maine pond the other day is ready to make affidavit as follows: "I hereby declare on oath that I did catch two pickerel on one hook. The first pickerel swallowed the bait and didn't like it. Apparently he tried to cough it up. At any rate he spewed the hook out under his gills and it floated off in the water to be grabbed by a second pickerel. Thus there came up two pickerel, all strung on a line.—Lewiston Journal.

Temperatures of Volcanoes.

Scientists have recently secured an accurate measurement of the temperature of boiling lava in a crater. The experiment was a very dangerous one, and it was considered a triumph of precaution no lives were sacrificed in making the test.

The crater of Kilauea in Hawaii was selected for examination. The work progressed very slowly. For a long time it was impossible to obtain results, but after several thermometers had been destroyed a pyrometer was substituted to advantage. The temperature recorded was 1,910 degrees centigrade, which is the same as 1,870 degrees Fahrenheit. Iron is still unmelted at this heat, but gold silver and copper become a molten mass at a lower temperature.—Harper's Weekly.

Turkeys Artificially Weighted.

Because all the turkeys in his stall were found to contain leaden weights, a New York butcher was recently fined $50. The fraud was detected by two inspectors of the bureau of weights and measures who went into the shop and ordered a nice solid turkey. They were shown one that weighed nine pounds. It cost 30 cents per pound. The inspector made the man clean the turkey before his eyes, and in the middle of the stomach was a sixteen ounce fishing sinker. All the turkeys in the place were collected and turned inside out and in each was found a lead sinker with weights varying from 12 to 24 ounces.

A NEW AND REVISED EDITION STORY OF THE HUGUENOTS

The local representative of the Gazette-News is in receipt of an autograph copy of a new and revised edition of the "Story of the Huguenots" by F. A. Mann, one of the pioneers of the East Coast section, but now located at Lompoc, Cal. The new edition is dedicated to the author's friend, Dr. H. C. Dimock, and is a neatly bound and attractive little volume. Mr. Mann is also getting out another edition of "The Story of Ponce de Leon." He says of the Story of the Huguenots that it is meeting with a much better sale in California than he anticipated, being a distinctly Florida story. Mr. Mann has many flattering press notices of the book which deals with interesting historical events of the early settlement of Florida, woven into a fascinating historical story. There has been a strong demand for the book since it has been out of print and this has encouraged the author to issue another edition. George C. Middleton of Crescent Beach, Anastasia Island, will be Mr. Mann's agent for the book in the East Coast section of Florida.

Centennial Towns.

There will be six "centennial towns" in Maine this year. Six towns were incorporated by the legislature of 1812, one of which has since grown to be a city. They are the city of Brewer on the Penobscot river, Phillips far up in Franklin county, Bingham on the Kennebec river, Troy in Waldo county, and Foxcraft and Sebec, Piscataquis county towns. Most of these places will have a centennial celebration. Some have been planning for some time and local historians have been gathering material for the historical address. The birthdays come in February, but following the usual customs will be held in the summer and in connection with something like an old home week, when the sons and daughters of the town will gather from all parts of the country. There will be family and class reunions, exercises in the town hall, a historical parade, a big dinner, always a "centennial ball" and music by the village band.—Waterville Sentinel.

Rushing Business.

Recently a well-known partner of a brokerage house was seen rushing wildly downstairs in a Broad street skyscraper. A friend stopped him and asked the cause of the hurry. "Why, an old client of mine stepped in to see me for a moment and the fool office boy did not tell him I was in an inside office and he left saying he was going to be shaved, so I am following him up." Later the broker was again met by his friend, who called out genially: "Did you find your customer in the barber's?" "Yes, old man, and he gave me a 10-share order in New York Central," was the triumphant reply. The friend said nothing, but thought all the more, for had not the same broker refused to carry "a mere 50 shares of Union Pacific" for him in 1906 on the plea that the firm did not care for "odd lots?"—Wall Street Journal.

FLORIDA MAN-EATING TURTLE CAPTURED NEAR PALM BEACH

BUFFALO MAN ATTACKED WHILE SWIMMING IN SURF BUT FINALLY MANAGES TO LASSO THE MONSTER.

The day of the sea serpent and other dreaded monsters of the deep has passed, now that the winter romancers have discovered a man-eating turtle roaming along the East Coast. Just where this monster has been keeping himself is not known, but the following in the New York World of recent date tells how he was recently lassoed and captured at Palm Beach:

"John Jordan of Buffalo, a guest of William J. Conners, his brother-in-law, was attacked while bathing at noon by one of the largest turtles ever seen here, and for 15 minutes, while he tried to defend himself, was threatened with bodily injury and perhaps death by drowning.

"He escaped with bites on the arms and legs, which are not considered serious.

"A turtle has never been known to attack a men in these waters. Mr. Jordan entered the water along in front of the Conners residence and was swimming 200 feet from shore when the turtle rose under him striking at him with his head. To save himself Mr. Jordan jumped on his back.

"The turtle swam for deep water and dove, unseating its rider. Coming to the surface it again struck at him viciously. Unable to swim away Jordan again climbed on the turtle's back and using his feet as a rudder and holding to the flippers he steered it toward shore.

"Meantime Miss Alice Conners, seeing his plight from the shore, summoned two Japanese servants, who rushed out with a clothes line, forming a noose, which they got over the turtle's head after a struggle in which both were bitten. The turtle measured five and a half feet in diameter."

HIS RECOVERY WAS SUDDEN

Passes to the Ball Game Worked a Speedy Cure of Mr. Jackson's Ailments.

Dan Lane, the well-known stock broker, and also a director of the Armory club, was commenting on the actions of a fighter in some nearby town. The fighter in question had apparently been all in up to the last round, when he came back and put out his man.

"What do you make of it?" asked the friend.

"It's like a friend of mine named Jackson," replied Mr. Lane. "Jackson's wife had a habit of thinking up little odd jobs for him to do on his day off, so he concocted a scheme by which he should be sick on his day of rest.

"Everything went well until after dinner and he was allowed to stay in bed. Early in the afternoon his wife entered the room and asked him if he didn't feel a little better.

"No," he answered, "I'm a sick man; too sick to go puttering around the house, putting on screen doors and other such things."

"It isn't that, dear," she replied, "but Jones is out here with two passes for the ball game."

"I, er-er, I um, er, I am feeling a little better," he said, getting out of bed.—Boston Traveler.

Tinfluenza.

The tin had crumbled in a gray dust, but the plumber was not in the least nonplused.

"It caught cold," he said. "That's all. Tin is very liable to catch cold if it gets in a temperature under 60 degrees. As a rule it recovers, but a tin cold often turns to influenza, and then the case is hopeless. Nothing can be done. The tin loses its luster, decays, and finally crumbles to a gray powder like this here.

"These tin colds are contagious. A tin dipper will give a cold to a saucepan, and a tincup has been known to contaminate an organ pipe.

"Only pure tin catches cold. For that reason, when tin is to occupy an exposed position or to encounter a low temperature, we alloy it with lead. Only alloyed tin is free from tinfluenza."

Part Played by Heredity.

Heredity plays an important part not only in tuberculosis and cancerous affection, but likewise in diabetes, rheumatism, gout and many other diseases. We do not inherit tuberculosis, but we do inherit a lessened vitality, or a tendency to contract tuberculosis infection. Underweights are usually people who have inherited such a lessened vitality, and they run the further risk of infection from their underweight brothers or sisters who are apt to be infected.

Appropriate Joy.

"John, at last I succeeded in getting you some meat very rare."

"Well done, my dear."

STANDARD FOR CLEANLINESS OF MILK NEEDED.

Everywhere milk is required to contain a certain percentage of fat. The next step is to require a certain degree of cleanliness as a condition of being allowed to purvey milk in cities. In New York city, the milk dealers are listed, with the percentage of bacteria contained in the milk of each, as shown by occasional tests. In the city of Washington tests made in 1907 showed certain samples containing less than 6,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter, while other specimens contained 500,000. When milk is required to conform to a fixed standard, strict cleanliness will be observed as a necessity.
